Holy Cross disciples ‘on the way’

WWJD - What would Jesus do? About 20 years ago, I was given a bracelet with this on it. I wore it as a reminder to be more like Jesus--or at least the person I've come to know as Jesus. So, how do I live my life like one who performs miracles and gathers people together to share about God's kingdom? Perhaps I needed to know Jesus better and develop a more personal relationship with him. By reflecting on the life of Jesus, I realized that he doesn't expect miracles from me. He wants me to share his love with all people. Visiting the sick or shut-ins may not heal them, but it may make their day more worthwhile. I can't multiply what I have, but I can share with those in need. Not being able to turn water into wine teaches me to be thankful for what I have. I may not be able to gather and preach to a large crowd of people, but maybe a kind word or gesture to someone in need can be just as effective as hearing the gospel. Life isn't always perfect or easy. We all have crosses to bear. Even Jesus questioned God about his cross but knew it was part of God's plan. We are part of God's plan. Are we living life in a way pleasing to God? Next time you are in a hard spot, just ask yourself "WWJD?" Barb

When asked the question, "What has Jesus done in my life?" and then to answer in 200-300 words, I was at a loss for words (for those of you who know me well, you understand that this is very rare). So, after a few days of thought, all I can say is simply, He SAVED me. He saved me from self-destruction, self-pity, hatred, self-centeredness, bitterness, guilt and so much more. He filled my heart with gratitude, joy, fulfillment, contentment and love. Disclaimer: Not always, but when I lose focus, I always go back to Him and we straighten it out together. I have not always had this kind of relationship with God. Although we have always been friendly, we didn't become intimate until a few years ago. I was asked to join a Bible Study with some moms from Holy Cross School because our kids attended school together. I was always searching for something and tried many different bible studies, groups, meetings and nothing seemed to resonate so I prayed for something to come along to help me deepen my faith. This small group of ladies met weekly and explored the bible together. All of us were Catholic, but many of us were new to understanding scripture, reading the bible, understanding its application for today and then living it. Looking back, it was a very slow transformation for me. To use a biblical analogy: God planted a seed in me that day, and it continues to grow daily. For me, my connection with God is directly related to how I connect with others. I need people! I need other Christians and to belong and involve myself in activities that center around Jesus. I know this is different for everyone. So, to begin, you can start like I did and just ask our Father and I promise, He will answer! Tammy

A few weeks ago I had the incredible opportunity to “live” a Cursillo, and for the first time in my life, truly understood what it means to feel the Love of Jesus. I have heard the teaching that we are all the Body of Christ, but I never fully appreciated what that really means. Through this wonderful experience, my eyes have been opened to the realization that each one of us has the opportunity to truly be a part of our Lord, Jesus Christ. And, once we recognize that, we are able to see Jesus everywhere. I saw the love of Jesus in all the people who made that Cursillo experience special, from my sponsor, to the speakers, to the people who set up, to those working the kitchen, and finally in all those who took time to pray for so many people that they have never even met. And since that Cursillo experience, I have seen the Love of Jesus in so many more people throughout our church and throughout our community. I am so grateful to be here, surrounded by so many incredible people. Finally, I am now seeing that to let Jesus live in each of us requires that we look at people through His eyes...through the eyes of Compassion and Mercy. As we arrive at the end of this Lenten season, Easter Sunday, may we all strive to see all God’s children through the eyes of Jesus, and let others see Jesus in each of us. Tom

What Jesus means to me:

Waking up in the morning to a beautiful sunrise.

Seeing a newborn fawn try to stand.

The fascination of a bee pollinating a bud.

The size and speed of a hummingbird.

The life cycle of a monarch butterfly.

The abundant harvest from a garden.

The birth of a child.

Having the opportunity to teach your child as much as you can to prepare them for life.

Watching your child ask for your help, knowing it is out of your hands.

Seeing your child recover and thrive after adversity.

Putting your wife's health in someone else's hands.

Having the opportunity to support the people you love.

Watching a sunset from your porch next to your wife.

For the forgiveness of sins and life everlasting.

Amen.

In my early adult years, I always knew that Jesus was with me but I wasn’t always with him. I was sleepwalking through my faith; I really didn’t think about Jesus on a regular basis other than the hour in Mass every Sunday. That’s not to say I didn’t believe I was a strong Catholic. I attended Mass as I had done all of my life, but I had no passion for my faith. I was going through the motions. Then a family tragedy struck, and my world and faith were rocked. Being lazy in my faith was no longer an option. I would either get stronger in it and grow from this or get more distant and wonder why God let this happen. My wife and I realized that we needed to turn to our faith to move forward as Jesus would want us to. That changed everything. Jesus is no longer just a thought on Sunday mornings. I now try every day to follow his words and live my life as he wants me to. That has made life much more fulfilling and meaningful. I am confident as a child of Jesus, knowing that I have a relationship with him and that my life here has a purpose. Myron

To love someone, you have to get to know them. So to love Jesus, I found it took prayer, listening to His words and thoughts, which leads to action, to loving Him. He gives us so much more than is possible to give Him. His love is endless, and He is always with us. He lifts us up when we fall and carries us when we feel we can't go on. All we have to do is turn to Him. The key words are 'turn to Him.' I count on Him and want Jesus to count on me. He is Love, He is Goodness, He is Trust. He is my all. I try to show Jesus my love for Him by loving others with His help and support. Alice

When I think of Jesus in my life I think of two things, love and commitment. In trying to follow in Jesus' life I believe you need both, as one is not as strong without the other. Jesus, through his dying on the cross for each of us, demonstrated both of these qualities. He was all in, he didn't waiver, he didn't make any excuses...he took the responsibility he was given and humbly acted upon it. Not because it was about HIM, but rather because it was for US. Trying to live this example every day, to put away our desires, our needs, our pain and reach out to others with love, compassion and true commitment is what I believe Jesus is patiently nurturing me to do each day. I feel extremely blessed to be a Catholic in today's world...the challenges are great, no doubt, but the rewards that linger if we can keep this focus are endless. Diane

On a Monday afternoon, about three years ago, I was ACCIDENTALLY introduced to Relevant Radio. To this day, I am enriched by this mysterious accident. I had returned to my car after an errand. My car was definitely showing its 270,000-mile age, especially in the interior electrical system. A buzz accompanied almost all radio programming. As a result, the radio was always OFF...except on this afternoon. When I started the car, the radio also started, without the buzz! It was on a station that was new to me. The program host had me engaged with a segment of the "Big Book on the Coffee Table," the "Word of the Day" and a few answers to listener calls. On that 20-minute ride home, I thought about my Catholic faith. I focused on the word of Jesus and his love. The radio dial is still set at 1050 AM. Relevant Radio programming now guides my thoughts throughout the day as I sew, prepare dinner, or drive from here to there. The programming and topics vary throughout the day, and it always gives me something to think about. It directs my thoughts to Jesus and his gift. Sometimes I join in a prayer, sometimes I chuckle, sometimes I cry. As we journey through this Lenten season, I encourage you to change that radio dial. Give Relevant Radio at 1050 AM a try as you commute to/from work, prepare and share a meal or just unwind in an easy chair. Clare

I follow Jesus by attending daily Mass and trying to become the kind of person He wants me to be. Without Jesus, I can do nothing. I love Him because of all he has done and suffered for us so we can spend eternity with him. If we put too much importance on worldly things or people, they all pass away. I want a perfect, all-satisfying, never-ending happiness in the end, and that will be with our Lord and Savior. As long as I can remember, Jesus has always been a part of my life and I feel very fortunate to have had parents who introduced Him to me.
